

ABSTRACT

A method for switching the use of a shared set of wireless I/O devices between multiple computers. The method of one embodiment comprises receiving a wireless request at a first machine to switch control of a device to a second machine. Control of the device is relinquished at said first machine. A token is transferred from the first machine to the second machine. Wireless control of the device is established at the second machine.